Mold Remediation Process

- When mold growth is noticed, we have a third-party testing company that analyzes the surface to determine if mold is present. If mold is detected, they help identify what strain it is, providing us with a better idea of how to remediate it. While some types of mold are more harmful than others, every mold releases spores and mycotoxins – both of which can lead to respiratory and other health complications. Mold needs moisture to grow so we will conduct an inspection to locate wet areas using moisture meters and thermal imaging cameras. If we find a source of moisture, ERSI will correct the issue to avoid any more potential growth.
- Preventing the transmission of the mold to other areas of the home or business is paramount as whenever mold is disturbed, it can release spores into the air that will travel and expand the issue. When mold is identified, ERSI will contain it to prevent the mold from spreading throughout the property. This is achieved using negative air machines and HEPA scrubbers to cleanse the air.
- ERSI will remove all affected materials that cannot be disinfected appropriately following the guidelines set forth by the IICRC. This cleaning is done safely by our trained technicians while wearing personal protection equipment (PPE) to prevent exposure to any unaffected areas or the client.
- ERSI uses antimicrobial disinfectants to be sure that we eradicated all mold. The third-party testing company then comes back and re-tests the property to ensure that we completely removed the mold. After the tests come back clear, the area is safe to reinhabit. If any drywall or other structures have been removed, ERSI also offers reconstruction services to aid in their replacement.

We understand that mold can be scary, and the worry of adverse health effects coupled with the potential cost of remediation that generally isn't covered by most insurances is stressful. Let ERSI help you to mitigate the damages you incur by calling at first sight of possible mold growth. Backed by the BBB, we are honest, trained professionals determined to help keep you and your loved ones healthy while preventing extensive costs by immediately taking care of your problem.
